Reducing HIV/STD Transmission in Infants, Adolescents and Women

A Family-Centered Approach

Tuesday, April 13, 2004 • 8:00 AM – 3:30 PM

Purpose:

This program is designed to provide clinicians with an update on current best practices for reducing HIV/STD transmission rates among infant, adolescent, and adult female patient populations.

Objectives:

Upon completion of this program, participants will be able to:

- ✗ Identify clinical and public health protocols which can help to reduce perinatal HIV transmission
- ✗ Describe clinical interventions specific to the treatment of STDs in HIV+ adolescents and women
- ✗ Utilize HIV prevention measures effective in reducing HIV transmission rates among HIV adolescent patients
- ✗ Recognize the impact of applying "Prevention with Positives" strategies within Title IV HIV care programs
- ✗ Incorporate age-sensitive approaches to the management of HIV disease among adolescents
- ✗ Adapt HIV counseling and testing practices for use when conducting the HIV rapid test
